

Memories of Chester, Herman Radmacher Series, Milldale Mill Video Transcription

This is the mill they have restored. The mill is down in what you would referred to as Milltown, which is right there on the main road before you get to Hacklebarney Road, on the corner. That's how it used to be. There was a bridge in front of it and on the other side was where I, and many other people, used to go swimming. The reason it was a good swimming hole was because the one whole side of the river was one huge rock. So you could get on the rock and you could go in there and the river was wide enough and deep enough to swim in. That was back in the 40s and 50s. Then they changed it all around and built the new road and it's altogether different today.
